

Dissertation and Thesis Personal Copies: Bindery Contact Information

As a courtesy to those graduate students who wish to order personal copies of their thesis or dissertation, the Graduate School has compiled a brief list of binderies we know will accept single- or short-run thesis and dissertation orders. Note: The Graduate School has not worked with these binderies directly, and we would appreciate any feedback you may have for future students.

Please keep in mind that the student must work directly with their bindery of choice to obtain price and procedural information. In some cases, the bindery may require that you send them printed manuscripts or arrange to have manuscripts printed and delivered by a local print shop. If the bindery does not have its own print press, ask for print shop recommendations.

D/T Personal Copies: Using Library Bindings as a Guide

The following information refers to the library's requirements for the binding of official printed submission copies. These guidelines are meant as a reference for students who are having personal copies bound through another bindery. You are not required to follow these instructions for your personal copies unless you want your personal copies to resemble an official submission copy.

Casing:

Size and type: 8.5" x 11" black buckram with adhesive binding. Official copies do not include any stamping on the front or back cover (see below for the spine).

Interior:

White or off-white endsheets; single-sided, white, 20 lb. (or higher) acid-free pages; and adhesive binding to hold it all together. Note: Sewn bindings are a little more durable, if available – the pages are less likely to fall out as they age, but they require additional set-up and materials. If your document is large or if you use paper heavier than 20 lb. weight, you may need to ask whether the bindery will be able to fit your manuscript into a single volume.

Spine:

The gold foil stamping on the spine is the only stamping on an official copy. The elements stamped on the spine, from top to bottom, include:

- The student's name, exactly as it appears on the title page (without degrees or titles);
- The submission year as it appears at the bottom of the title page;
- The formal abbreviation of the degree awarded, according to the degree spelled out on the title page. (See p. 3 for a list of degree abbreviations.)
